Indian farmers are being plagued by several problems. These problems, directly and indirectly, affect the life of a farmer. Indian farming practices and other activities of agriculture consume time as well as the efforts of a farmer. The problems faced by Indian farmers go unnoticed and unheard by the authorities.

We wish to elaborate on some of the solutions to improve the lives of farmers of India.

1. To include use of technology and modern farming techniques. The farmers should be educated about effective use of materials, methods such as hydroponics and aeroponics.
2. To bring strong regulations by government (for example – more efficient and strict Agricultural Produce Market Committee (APMC) and increase of Minimum Support Price (MSP).
3. Curb the corruption & malpractices in the existing system and monopolies of certain corporate companies.
4. Provision for good quality raw materials and incentives such as lands, loans to farmers.
5. Improve the rights of farmers by providing a say in matters relating to problems faced by them.
